

Beatrice Pediconi

Rome, 1972. Lives and works in New York.

Beatrice Pediconi is a multimedia artist whose practice locates itself within a discourse around drawing, photography, painting and video.

Utilizing water as the primary means to create subtle and floating imagery, her work investigates the fleeting, precarious and vulnerable condition of transience.

Her latest body of work involves lifting diaphanous filaments of emulsion from Polaroids to free float them on paper and on canvas that has previously been painted using pigments of various hues. They represent ghostly testaments of loss and regeneration. Minimal and organic, many appear to be flowers, reflecting the fragility of all life, its inevitable progression towards renewal and its message of hope in times fraught with destruction.
